Social and Civic Competences of Migrant Women

THRIVE in short...

The extent and success of integration can be measured by the degree of parity or equality of outcomes with other members of the receiving or host community. The THRIVE project directly addressed this 'parity gap' across the consortium by developing educational and innovative solutions to actively bring people and cultures closer, and help female migrants realise their true civic and social potential through education. Trust is also at the heart of the matter; social inclusion happens at the local level, there is significant value in working with local authorities and communities to cultivate a climate of mutual understanding, trust, and cooperation that THRIVE will build upon. THRIVE aims to harness the potential for learning within female migrant communities that comes with 'always on, always accessible' mobile technology platforms.

THRIVE Final Conference in Vauréal (France)...

The final conference of the project took place on the 27th of June in Vauréal (France) and also online.

The event represented the culmination of the hard work, cascade training, developed outputs in presenting and celebrating the project results to a broad audience and thus giving them the stage for sustainable implementation in the future.

At the event the intellectual outputs developed were presented to a very varied audience of adult and community educators, cultural mediators, educational managers and policy makers.

The event was also a chance to give a powerful voice to the end beneficiaries of the project; female migrants and third country nationals themselves, leading to topical discussion and the chance to debate institutional, integration and educational policy and reform across the project consortium and the EU member states.

What is next on THRIVE...

- All partners will be involved in the exploitation of the materials obtained during the implementation of the project and will carry out the multiplier events in their respective countries.
- All partners will also contribute to the planning of the final report to be submitted at the end of the project.
